

Rethinking Guardianship for Transition Age Young Adults with Disabilities:

The Promise of Supported Decision Making

Tuesday, November 14th. 6:30-8. Virtual

Presenter: Anita Raymond, Center for Excellence in Supported Decision Making

Commonly, parents of children with developmental disabilities are encouraged to seek guardianship when their child is approaching age 18. But that may be overly restrictive.

Learn how Supported Decision Making can increase choice for a person with disabilities. We will also address concerns about vulnerability.

Objectives:

- Explore reasons why families are often encouraged to seek guardianship and how to address concerns
- Understand the benefits and potential downsides of guardianship
- Describe decision making options
